Earth Day's Historic Significance

In 1969, Wisconsin Senator Gaylord Nelson had the idea for Earth Day while reading about the student-led anti-war movement. The day dedicated to protecting and preserving 'Mother Earth' was April 22, 1970, and is credited as launching the modern environmental movement.

The inaugural Earth Day was so successful that both political parties embraced environmental awareness at the time. The Endangered Species Act, the National Environment Policy Act, the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts, all have their roots in the first Earth Day.

To date, Earth Day has enlisted 22,000 partners in 90 countries to mobilize the environment movement. Now over 1 billion people participate in Earth Day, making it the world's largest civic observance.

The Time is Now

It's clear that climate change represents the biggest challenge to the future of humanity. We are threatening the very life-support systems that make our world habitable. As the global population steps up with an urgent and clear conviction for essential change— we will be facing unprecedented catastrophes and extreme consequences.

The good news is that we still have time to take the necessary steps via innovation, technology and sustainable lifestyles. Change is coming and we are the change!
Earth Day San Francisco is committed to the Green Mobility Movement.

We are showcasing the latest models of EVs, E-bikes, Scooters, and even Skateboards. Our goal is to share new options for transit, commuting and recreation. California designers and engineers have always been at the forefront of conceptualizing efficient and environmentally-friendly vehicles. Yes, there are challenges associated with sustainable mobility, but we can solve them together!
Arts & Culture

Earth Day SF delivers local and national music performers attracting large and diverse audiences.

Our eclectic arts programming attracts insightful, environmentally-focused artists and artwork. This year includes Richard Felix and his Art Wall, an immersive art experience, an Indigenous peoples opening ceremony, the aforementioned eco-fashion, and live cooking demos by celebrity vegan chefs. There will be much more to announce before the event.

Our music stage in 2022 featured the queen of psychedelic rock: The Sunshine Garcia Band, as well as legendary Andre Thierry and Zydeco Magic, who's upbeat sound had people dancing in the streets. 2023 promises more Psychedelic, Funk, Rock, and Global beats.
